The main criteria for selection are academic and teaching excellence. The successful candidates will provide evidence of high quality scholarly output that demonstrates a record for independent research leading to peer-assessed publications in one of the foundational areas of Computer Science. A commitment to secure external research funding, as well as strong potential for outstanding teaching contributions at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, and ongoing dedication to academic and pedagogical excellence in support of the School's programs are requirements for these positions. Ability to work in collaborative multidisciplinary settings, course development and student supervision are required. The successful candidate will be required to make substantive contributions through service to the School, the Faculty, the University, and/or the broader community. Salary will be commensurate with qualifications and experience.

Queen's University is one of Canada's leading research-intensive universities with a global reputation and is a recognized leader in Canadian higher education. The School of Computing has 22 full-time and 20 cross-appointed faculty, over 500 undergraduate students, and over 140 graduate students. The School offers undergraduate programs in Computer Science, Software Design, Biomedical Computing, Computing and Mathematics, Computing and the Creative Arts and Cognitive Science. The School also offers Master's, and Doctoral programs in Computer Science.

Queen's historic campus is located in the heart of the vibrant Kingston community in the Thousand Islands region of South Eastern Ontario. Queen's is positioned centrally with respect to three major metropolitan areas: Toronto, Montreal, and Ottawa.
