Job
Description

George Fox University announces a tenure-track faculty position in mechanical engineering, to begin in August 2018. We seek applicants with the ability to teach in a broad range of undergraduate mechanical engineering courses, giving priority to candidates with expertise in one or more of the following specializations: materials, manufacturing and/or engineering mechanics. In addition, the successful candidate will be expected to engage in appropriate professional and scholarly activities, supervise internships, advise students, perform undergraduate research, and carry out other faculty responsibilities.

George Fox University, a Christ-centered community, prepares students spiritually, academically, and professionally to think with clarity, act with integrity, and serve with passion. Professors teach all truth as God's truth, integrating all fields of learning around the person and work of Jesus Christ, bringing the divine revelations through sense, reason, and intuition to the confirming test of Scripture. As a Christ-centered community, George Fox University is an institution that values diversity as an essential dimension of God's design for human communities. In seeking to become a more inclusive community, we especially encourage applications from women and candidates from racial and ethnic backgrounds that are underrepresented on our faculty.

Responsibilities include, but are not limited to:

- Teaching a broad range of undergraduate courses within the curriculum of the Department of Mechanical & Civil Engineering in areas such as materials engineering, manufacturing, and/or engineering mechanics.
- Ability to develop and sustain an ongoing program of relevant scholarship.
- Participation in the work of the department and the university, including advising and serving on university committees as needed.

Qualifications

- Ph.D. in a relevant field required. Applicants who are A.B.D. in a Ph.D. program will be considered, but must have an earned the Ph.D. by the time of appointment.
- Previous teaching, research and industrial experience are desirable (but not required).
- Demonstrated excellence in teaching is essential.
- A record of relevant scholarship is essential.
- A commitment to working with a diverse population of students is essential; demonstrated experience in this area is preferred.
- All applicants must express a personal commitment to Jesus Christ and express their Christian testimony in a local church. In addition, professors agree to live in agreement with the Community Lifestyle Statement and affirm the theological commitments expressed in the Statement of Faith.

Salary and Rank

Appointment at the Assistant Professor level is anticipated, though candidates with significant teaching experience at previous institutions may be considered for appointment at the rank of Associate Professor. Salary and benefits are competitive with comparable institutions.

Application Procedures - apply only through jobs.georgefox.edu

EEO/AA Policy

George Fox University seeks to become a more racially and ethnically diverse community. We believe this goal is in keeping with our mission as a Christ-centered community and so we especially encourage women and candidates in underrepresented groups.
