skills against the backdrop of rigorous engineering fundamentals. The successful candidate will teach courses across the curriculum including upper level Civil Engineering and Construction Engineering Technology courses. These can include Water Resources, Fluid Dynamics, Civil Engineering Materials, Structures, Construction and Surveying, Environmental Engineering, and related labs.

Lecturers are expected to serve on committees, advise students and student groups, and participate in curriculum development efforts as part of a diverse, interdisciplinary and supportive community of learners. See the College of Engineering and Science website for more information:

<http://www.coes.latech.edu>.

The vision of the College of Engineering and Science at Louisiana Tech University is to be a world leader in integrating engineering and science in education and research. To build a diverse workforce the college encourages applications from women, minorities, veterans, and individuals with disabilities. See the College website for more information: <http://coes.latech.edu>.

Interested candidates should compile a single PDF application that includes 1) cover letter; 2) curriculum vitae; 3) description of teaching experience and interests; 4) the names and contact information for at least three references. It is expected that candidates will include experiences and plans to support participation of underrepresented groups in STEM throughout their application.

Review of applications and nominations will begin immediately, and will continue until a suitable candidate is identified. The starting date for the position is expected to be September 1, 2024.
