Job Description

Assistant/Associate Professor-Instructional Track

The University of Rochester's Department of Mechanical Engineering seeks to hire an outstanding instructional track faculty member. The position will be at the rank of Assistant or Associate Professor on the Instructional Track. Applicants must be dedicated teachers with the ability to be the primary instructor in upper-level undergraduate courses broadly including mechanical design, modern simulation techniques and manufacturing. Expertise running undergraduate laboratories that include fabrication and experimentation, or significant related industry experience is desired. This faculty position includes responsibilities primarily in undergraduate instruction with opportunities in graduate instruction, as well as in collaborative and independent research, especially related to instruction.
